CELEBRATING RAKIURA

January—February 2014

$2.00

Many islanders spent the holidays off-island: Bravo, Millar's Beach, and North Arm hosted heaps of revellers over the holidays. It wasn't unusual to see rafts of ten or more boats tied together up the Inlet. Christmas and New Year's weren't perfect but the days between were scorching hot and glassy calm in the Inlet. The Bay had a nice New Year's Eve replete with a band and bonfire at Halfmoon Bay, fireworks at Horseshoe, and flashing blue lights all over the show (the fuzz was out in force enforcing drink driving laws).

The Hall saw a full house for the Community Christmas party. The magician made the kids laugh; Santa was great too though the babies cried. Old Saint Nick is a concept you have to get used to. When I first told my kids that a guy with a beard and a big tummy was going to creep into our house at night, they were not amused. I made the mistake of youtubing it to explain: Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer and his bullying peers and insanely laughing Santa just further freaked my kids out. Maybe most disturbing are the herky-jerky motions of 1960s stop-animation: charming to nostalgic adults but utterly creepy to iPadding rugrats.

Did you hear the tale of the missing monk? See police blotter (p6).

The shark cage diving issue has reared its big snub nosed toothy head again, right on the cusp of cage diving season. Anecdotal evidence has been mounting that white pointers are becoming more aggressive toward boats, and a recent incident sparked several articles in the greater media (yes, media greater than SIN!). After a white pointer lunged at a dinghy full of unimpressed visitors, stories appeared in the NZ Herald, SLT, ODT, and Yahoo News. Margaret Hopkins, Richard Squires, Clinton Duffy, Storm Stanley, and Brett Hamilton all expressed their concerns to reporters, and Brett gave an interview to Marcus Lush on Radio Live (www.radiolive.co.nz). The cage diving operators continue to refute any suggestion that their actions are altering the sharks' behaviour. More page 5.

We have a new column! Thanks to Sharon Ross for sharing her knowledge with us. See page 7 for Voice of a Girl Mechanic.

Farewell and good luck to our friend and musician Pearson. And we wish all the best for Tam, James, Sayla and Archie in their new ventures.

Finally, apologies this issue is a bit late.

ALUMINIUM PLANT

(Lamium galeobdolon)

Aluminium plant is a weed found in many gardens in Oban and now is a good time to tackle it. Smothering is the best control method; no green waste to worry about.

What is it?

Aluminium plant is a ground cover that is closely related to mint. It has striking patterns on its heart shaped leaves and yellow flowers.

What is the problem?

This plant spreads quickly to densely cover the ground in shady areas, which prevents other plants from growing. It spreads by fragments, so be careful with the green waste.

How to control it?

- Dig out small areas, ensuring all the roots are removed.
- Cover for several months with black plastic.

Please contact the Pest Plants Biosecurity Officer at Environment Southland if you find this plant – email service@es.govt.nz or telephone 211 5115

BOOK REVIEW from Gwen Neave

I have recently been reading a swag of Dana Stabenow books whose main character is Alaskan native law enforcer, Kate Shugak. Now reading two or three books from the same author back to back is to usually risk threatening over-kill of said author's particular style. Not so Ms. Stabenow's books on the Alaskan heroine living in the shadow of the Quilak Mountains. Stabenow's insight into the economic, environment and social perils of existing in the harsh conditions of rural Alaska – 'the last great wilderness on earth' - gives her readers a clear picture of the unforgiving land and climate and the unique people who live there. Her knowledge of the history of this state's development, its political traumas, its past and continuing subjugation to and rape by Outsiders and the struggles of its many Native groups makes very compelling reading.

Kate Shugak is totally believable as the heroine of the nineteen Stabenow books that feature this crime fighter. Her love life is erratic and strewn with casualties, and tragedy. She is a flawed champion with doubts, who falls prey to ill judgements and is stubborn as all get out. Her integrity however is never (well, hardly ever) in doubt although Stabenow does not make her a sanctimonious Saint.

Stabenow's humour is best seen in her passages referring to Mutt, Shugak's half wolf, half husky companion. Mutt's intelligence supersedes that of most of the Alaskans she comes into conflict with and Stabenow's descriptions of her are deftly drawn. Mutt exudes most of the noble, and ignoble, characteristics of a human as well as courage and unflinching loyalty to her mistress.

The books teem with fascinating Park inhabitants, or Park Rats, a blend of mad, bad and cunning Alaskan homesteaders, miners, fishers, hunters and lawmen.

The library staff have helpfully displayed the collection of Stabenow books in stock with numbers depicting their place in the Shugak series. Great reading was guaranteed for the cool and wet days that have (so far) heralded this year's emergence.

LETTERS ☒ ☒ ☒

Hello dear Jess, Season's Greetings and thank you for the December S.I.N. Now, that Mason Bay photo: my cousin Nancy Schofield could name all those people (the photo probably came from her), but she'll be away over Christmas. However, I can identify at the reins her father Arthur Wm. Traill Jr.; not sure who's the next passenger but it might be Lena Smith; then Nancy and I THINK me in the rear of the dray. Mateen Traill is walking along behind the dray, encouraging the cavalcade. The dog's probably Mick or Mac, but I can't remember the horse's name. Merry Christmas,

Reply to Jules' column

During the later part of the 19th, through the early stages of the 20th centuries; Manchester in the United Kingdom was famed for it's (now derelict) textile industry. New Zealand, being a relatively new country at the time was completely reliant on imports for all it's textiles & linens. Manchester Linen became much sought after for bedding, due to it's superior quality over alternative sources. (As today, Egyptian Cotton is considered the superior article.) So consumers would seek it out by name. Over time, where once they would have asked for 'Manchester Linen' - this became shortened, to simply 'Manchester'. Hence Kiwi's now call bedding Manchester. [from wikianswers]

As an immigrant I had to laugh at Jules "language problems" and Cheerio sandwiches. Forty years ago when I first arrived, pork and chicken were cheap options for meat in UK and celebration meats in NZ. The butcher on Cuba Street, Wellington, probably funded a trip to UK from the profits on my pork and chicken purchases in my first 2 weeks in NZ. And I'll never forgive the greengrocer who blithely sold me a bag of tamarillos and watched straight-faced as I tried to bite into this delectable-looking fruit. (I also threw away my first purchase of passion-fruit 'cos the middle was rotten – all runny and green-and-gold.) I soon sorted out "iggs un buy-con", "fush un chups" (but was suitably confused in this so-called 'accentless' country to encounter "feesh an cheeps"). I did think NZ was a Third World country when I noted that most of the school kids were going to school shoe-less, and these great hulking lads of 16 and 17 years old had to go to school in short "little kids" trousers. I was even more confused when these same young men, resplendent in school blazers, climbed into the driving seats of cars ..... The short-pants situation was quickly explained when I saw my first Wellington 'city gent', outfitted in an immaculate pin-stripe suit, conservative tie, briefcase, umbrella, newspaper – and short pants (albeit obviously the tailored bottoms of his suit) and long socks – leaving a bare two inches of bare skin between the bottom of the 'trousers' and tops of his socks. Why bother? On their first visit to NZ a couple of years later, my Dad was very confused at Auckland Airport when the lady in the cafe where he bought coffees asked him for "another tin sins please". By then, I was able to laugh at him, and now when I visit UK, my rellies have been heard to say: "By gum! Dunt oor Soozan tork foony!" (Translation: "Crikey Dick! Doesn't our Susan sound peculiar in her speech!")

But there is one point that Jules made that I'm not sure I agree with – Manchester. I think that this was pretty much a world-wide term applied to fabric made from cotton (in the pre-Indian cotton days), and famously manufactured in that city. I remember my Nana being somewhat patronising about a tablecloth that was "only starched Manchester, not real Irish linen". But I do hope Jill continues to keep Jules out of the kitchen, or the school kids will be having Mars Bar sandwiches for lunch! However, it's a Southern Hemisphere thing to have "sprinkles" ("hundreds -and-thousands in Brit-speak) on bread and butter, so maybe it's not such an impossible scenario after all Jules!

Sharks playing bumper cars with dinghies; sharks attacking outboards; sharks biting buoys; sharks circling small boats; sharks sighted at Halfmoon Bay, Deadman's, off Acker's, within meters of recreational divers just outside Horseshoe Bay... and earlier this month, lunging at a dinghy. Sharks loitering around boats like dogs waiting at the door for a feed. Has cage diving modified white pointer behaviour?

Scientists are cautious to comment but the anecdotal evidence has been mounting for several years that the behaviour of white pointers around here does seem to be altered. People who have fished and dived and boated in these waters all their lives observe that white pointers have become more aggressive and are drawn to the sight and sound of boats. Some Islanders are pointing the finger at the shark cage diving companies operating in Foveaux Strait.

The cage dive guys refute this and continue to claim that the fishing boats are a bigger draw than the cage dive boats because they unload more guts; that sharks have always been here; and that the cage diving business is doing the Island a service providing an economic boost to the community (one cage dive operator has cited $100,000 a season).

And the fishermen counter that they aren't disputing these claims. Yes, sharks have always been here (of course they are here, to feed on the seal pups); yes, a fishing boat cleaning fish will be alluring to a shark; yes, cage dive tourists likely spend money on other amenities here.

The concern is not about the presence of the white pointers. The concern is about their behaviour. Brett and Squizzy are among locals who believe the sharks are behaving more boldly and aggressively toward boats. Shark expert Clinton Duffy points to evidence from Oz that sharks have learned from cage boats that Boats = Feeds.

Some people get tsked for feeding kaka because it interferes with their natural behaviour. The cage guys are feeding tuna to white pointers, a protected species. Tuna doesn't occur naturally in Foveaux Strait and is, as Brett pointed out on RadioLive, "like candy to kids." What could possibly be occurring in the shark's brain? Hear boat. See diver. Eat treat. Hear boat, see diver, eat treat. Synapses fire, neurons sparkle. Boat, human, snack. Boat, human, snack.

It's a dangerous Pavlovian experiment unfolding on our doorstep. Though some locals have now spoken up and there's been a flurry of media attention, it will be interesting to see if anything changes on this front.

The Stewart Island Health Centre Nurses Debs and Marty along with the committee wish to thank the South Seas Quiz Night participants, also Vicki and Helen for their generous donation of $615.

The nurses have the purchase of a small hand held scanner in mind when we have enough funds available. Once again thank you all . We will keep you informed of our progress. Also the Health Centre will be having a produce stall at the fire brigade on February 6th Waitangi Day.

The Island Beat

Business Break up, Christmas and New Year celebrations this year were celebrated with good spirit. As a result there were few problems. The weather could have been a bit more cooperative.

Reported Crime:

- Between the 16th of December and the 6th of January four house windows were smashed on an unoccupied holiday house at Leask Bay.
- On the 27th of December Police investigated a domestic assault. On the 7th of January a 23 year tourist was arrested for shop-lifting a Jacket from Glowing Sky's shop Halfmoon Bay

Traffic:

- Drink driver vehicle stops over the holiday period resulted in 1 driver being processed for drink driving.. Police are awaiting Blood test results. Most drivers stopped were responsible and passed the road side breath screening test. A reminder that the wharf rules are being enforced to make the transition of people and freight on and off the Island as smooth as problem free as possible.

Found Property:

Police are currently holding the following items of found property:

- Men's Watch found Bald Cone on the 09/12/13 and is engraved on the back 'Shona and Colin 40 years' A quantity of cash was found on Fuchsia Walk track on the 26/12/13.

Search and Rescue:

- Late on the evening of the 25th of December 2013 a Monk staying at Deep Bay was reported overdue after going for a walk at 1 p.m. Immediate searches of the Ackers point, Golden bay Deep Bay and all small tracks around the Ringaringa road area failed to locate the Monk. The monk arrived back in Halfmoon Bay at 0930 a.m. the next day after spending an uncomfortable wet and cold night on the Rakiura Track. The batteries went flat on his torch, Cell phone and camera causing him to sit it out in the rain until daylight.
- On the 30th of December a Hamilton Tramping club member was flown out of the Rakiura National Park after breaking a leg on the track between Freds Camp and Rakeahua Hut.

In SIN's new column "Voice of a Girl Mechanic" Sharon Ross will share some of her garage wisdom with us. Following is a bit about our new contributor:

I am married (to Pete) and have 2 children, a daughter Devon (22) who has just graduated from Massey Uni with a 1st class honours degree in spatial design and Braeden (15) and often seen helping at the garage in school holidays. He is in Year 11 at Kings High school in Dunedin and is awaiting his Cambridge exam results.

I come from a small town of 400 people on the Taieri Plains outside Mosgiel. My background is Nursing, I trained as a General and Obstetric Nurse (I was in the class before Marty Peppers and surprisingly do remember him as a student!), I spent 2 years in Surgical Nursing in Balclutha Hospital, 20 years in Orthopaedic Nursing at Dunedin Public Hospital, the last ten years of my Nursing career as a clinical tutor for Otago Poly and as Orthopaedic Nurse Educator at DPH. Following a car accident in 2006, I was forced to give up nursing and tutored computing and business skills for Otago Polytechnic until I married Pete in 2008 and shifted to Cromwell. We had the opportunity to set up a new workshop in Frankton, Queenstown in 2009, starting with 3 customers on our first day and 4 years later having over 2000. It was an extremely busy workshop and a steep learning curve but as a team we got there!

Sharon with husband Pete

We bought our little holiday home here in 2011 up on Kamahi Road and loved the opportunity to visit as often as we could, before the chance came to purchase Island Transport in 2012. With our lease due to run out in Frankton in June 2013, the opportunity was too good to pass up and the rest as they say is history. I was very grateful to the wonderful support I got from the existing staff of Jack, Bryan Cronin, Jeanette and Bruce Ford, which enabled me to muddle my way through the initial transition from Frankton to Island life whilst Pete worked between the 2 workshops. It was a challenging time being alone on the Island 4 days out of 7 but the welcome we have both received, the generosity and support of both the Islanders and the crib owners has been very humbling.

New WOF Expiry dates

Due to government regulatory changes from Jan 1st 2014 the NZTA have determined new WOF expiry dates as outlined in the table below. If you have any queries please contact your local WOF inspection service centre - on Stewart Island this is Pete Ross Automotive. Please note this only applies to any WOF issued after 1.1.14

Date WOF is issued	Vehicles date of First Registration Anywhere	WOF Expiry
1 Jan 2014 – 30 June 2014	On or after 1 Jan 2004	12 month WOF
1 Jan 2014 – 30 June 2014	Before 1st Jan 2004	6 month WOF
From 1st July 2014	Any WOF issued within 2 years from date of 1 st registration anywhere	Wof expires on 3rd anniversary of date of first registration anywhere
From 1 st July 2004	On or after 1 st Jan 2000 (other than a vehicle fitting criteria above)	12 month WOF

This seems complex at first glance but for most of the Stewart island vehicles, they are older than first being registered after 1st Jan 2000 and therefore the WOF requirement of 6 monthly remains unchanged. Still confused - contact Pete or Sharon to clarify!

Whilst in Frankton, I was talking to our current rep from the MTA about how the monthly magazine lacked anything appealing to the many women involved in the industry (unless of course they were interested in the merits of limited slip differential vs ... which I wasn't), and he suggested I write a column. At about the same time Pete's Mum had posted me up a copy of a book called "The Girl Mechanic" and the idea was born.

I wanted to write something that appealed to both, was in plain speak, gave information but with a humorous and female slant on things. My background knowledge before I met Pete about cars was almost nil. I expected to put petrol in them and them to go. However I was a farmers wife in the back blocks of South Otago in the 80's so could change a tyre without breaking a finger nail, knew that cars responded better to some TLC (my Dad had made sure I knew how to check the water and oil, and understood the value of regular servicing when I bought my first little (red of course) Mitsubishi Lancer back in 1983. Since then much to Pete's horror I have always had Mitsis, the present one which suffers the indignity of sitting in the cold and rain at Invercargill airport. I would rather watch paint dry than any version of car racing but do know the difference now between cambelts and chains, can identify a cv joint at 100 paces and find the dirt and grease of a workshop is probably a much cleaner environment than some of the nursing situations which occurred on a regular basis!

Farewell from the Foster's!

It only seems like yesterday, I was introducing myself as the new Project Administrator for the local environmental champions – SIRCET. Well, Lawrie and I are on the move again and this will be my last article for SIN before we head back to the mainland. As much as we like this piece of paradise, we are missing out on important events in our family's lives and are suffering a major dose of FOMO (Fear Of Missing Out).

Thanks for having us – we will take some great memories with us on our next adventure and will spread the word about the unique and untouched world that is Stewart Island.

<http://sailsashore.co.nz/wordpress/2013/10/animal-control-project>

A field trial is currently set up at Acker's Point and apart from having to increase the wattage of the solar panel, all is going well. As it happens the trap has had a 'customer' when the unit did catch a seriously large RAT. At 2 am one morning Denise received not one text but several, as the rat had munched through the cable, triggering the unit several times. (Another slight design modification required!) We have also had a promised donation of 3 units by a Crib Owner. This is very heartening as it means we will be able to field 10 units once the panel size issues have been sorted.

Other Uses and Applications

The SMS units we are using have several applications of course. They will accept 2 separate inputs and they can also output 2 separate signals. These can be used for controlling almost anything from a cell phone but it is the input capability that has real potential here for boat owners. Connect a unit to a float switch and the vessel is immediately covered from bilge flooding. And while probably the automatic bilge pump will cope in the short term, once the battery goes flat or the pump burns out or otherwise fails, then receiving a warning text could well save a heap of grief. For further information, contact Pete Tait 03-2191151.

Ooops – a – daisy
I think I had an identity crisis in the Christmas edition of the SIRCET newsletter. I'm a wee boy kiwi and I have a shrill voice (kind of like my pants are too tight) not a hoarse one as reported. Sorry for the muck-up folks!

SIRCET Kiwi advocacy Update

By Cherie Hemsley

Monitoring during December of the kiwis that were released into the Ackers project area in February 2013 has made my Christmas!!! TX12 is still hanging around the golf course area, possibly torn between two loves? Who will she choose? Bush Boy or City Slicker? I don't know about you, but I'm sitting on the edge of my seat waiting to find out!!!! I'll be keeping a close eye on her movements this month!

In conjunction with Trademe and Kiwis for Kiwi, SIRCET offered to auction the naming rights to two relocated Kiwis. This auction was won by Beyond Services (100% Kiwi owned, multi-service organization in Auckland and Wellington). They have named TX18 Matatika and TX14 Ngaio. These two birds have fallen in love! While out monitoring this month volunteers Stacey Wilford, Gael Gordon and David Streit and I located two kiwis in the same burrow! Matatika and Ngaio!

We decided to enlist the help of Denise Hayes and set up a trail cam outside the burrow to see what we could see. We received some amazing footage, not only are Matatika and Ngaio very touchy feely with each other, but they have produced a chick!!!! Ngaio, the female, is the one in the foreground with the longer beak and Matatika, the male, has the shorter beak. They have produced a beautiful, small fluffy (not bad looking) chick!!!! I can't wait to see what how this family grows! I'll keep you posted.

Once again we located TX22 in the same area having another moi under some more crown fern!!!! He may need to work on his approach with the ladies as he seems to be on his own.

Matatika and Ngaio having a smooch

Tom-Cat Text Trap!

Beware marauding moggies the Tom-Cat Text Trap (TCTT) is up and running and ready to wreak havoc on the furry feral felines. An international touch, local environmentalists and Kiwi Ingenuity at its best have been combined to wage war against feral cats which are a real threat to native birdlife on Stewart Island.

An annual visitor to the Island, Tom Sandoz, has made a sizeable donation to SIRCET, indicating a preference for using technology to reduce labour costs and at the same time to increase efficiency.

For several years Stewart Island local, Peter Tait, has been involved with SIRCET, and is well aware that feral cats are actively trapped around the Acker's Point reserve. Live capture traps are used so these need to be checked on a daily basis when opened which is labour intensive and reduces resources to other pest control projects. So wouldn't it be great to use technology that consists of a device that attaches to a cat trap and when the trap is sprung, a text message alerts the Pest Control Officer. Commercial telemetry traps are available but expensive at $600 each. Peter thought he could do better that that and after a lot of research put together a trial unit that will reduce the cost to $400. (Full details of materials used available on

And as Aretha would say,
Everyone can see we're together
As we walk on by
And we fly just like birds of a feather
We know that's no lie
We are family.....

Our Valuable Volunteers:

Gael Gordon (from Auckland) has been volunteering with SIRCET since early November and will be with us to the end of February. David Streit (from Switzerland) started early December and unfortunately finished on the 10th January. Both of them have been a HUGE help to SIRCET and have assisted with: nursery work, weeding including the Lonneker's project, trapping, building new rat traps and trap maintenance, installing new monitoring and trap lines, Little Blue Penguin counts/Titi burrowscoping....

Gael and David's stories and their account of their time on Stewart Island will feature in the February edition of SIRCET news but I did ask Gael "What do you think of life on Stewart Island"?

Her reply "I have loved life on Stewart Island. Aside from the beautiful unspoiled landscape and abundant native wildlife, the thing that stands out most for me is the incredible sense of community that prevails here. People do care about and look out for each other, you can walk around at any time day or night and feel perfectly safe, and there is an evident pride and respect for the environment. Three things that have really stood out for me - the cake stall for the Philippines Typhoon that raised over $1000 in the space only a couple of hours one Saturday morning, Vicki's Sunday night pub quiz that raises incredible amounts of money that is donated back into the community by way of support to local organisations; and the night the NZ Ballet came to town! I have also been made to feel incredibly welcome during my time here, something I very much appreciate and certainly helped make my time here that much more enjoyable.

I will miss Stewart Island when the time comes to say goodbye but I will never forget the incredible, seemingly endless array of amazing experiences I have had here, or down-to-earth honest, warm and genuine people I have met along the way".

Denise and the Trustees would like to express a huge thank you to both Gael and David. In Denise's words "I couldn't have got through all the work without their help, especially installing the new monitoring lines and maintaining/checking the traps!"

BOOK REVIEW from Sue Ford
 Reading advice for Tweenagers, plus "The Ninth Circle" by Alex Bell

I thought Joy Cowley wrote solely for a younger age group – Mrs. Wishy-Washy and so on. I received a shock on reading "Starbright & the Dream Eater", immediately followed by "Hunter". You may have guessed that I like a little fantasy, a touch of the supernatural. We have both in "Starbright", the 12-year old tomboy main character. She lives with her special-needs sister and their parents in small-town America. At least Starbright thinks that's who she lives with – we know better! The surprising details of Starbright's birth lead directly to the startling and scary responsibility that the girl must shoulder, to defeat a parasitic invader from outer space. If she gets it right, she can steer the world onto a parallel path where the humans don't all die of Spindle Sickness in order to feed the energy needs of the Dream Eater. Spindle Sickness is so named because people with it fall asleep and never wake up. As Starbright points out, the name is stupid because Sleeping Beauty, inspiration for the name, did wake up eventually, and those unlucky enough to "catch" Spindle Sickness just die. There is a prophecy to fulfil, but it also details the possibility that the "child who knows no fear" and can save the planet might not take up the challenge! Of course, Starbright – who knows no fear except of cockroaches – is up for it. The problem is, no-one believes what she discovers and time is running very short. Un-put-down-able!

"Hunter" is less 'fantasy', more 'supernatural'. The story takes place where two worlds collide, one in 1805, the other in 2005. In 1805, a teenaged no-name Maori slave is using his sixth sense to find food for his Southern iwi masters, to hunt for them. He has a sort of inner-eye (moe-mahi), but the things he sees, from eels to the last moa, are really there when he goes looking for them. Imagine the puzzlement when he sees an enormous white bird turn into a waka and a bloodied hu-hu (or pakeha) girl climbs out – but in going to help her, she isn't there .... Meanwhile, in 2005, three Invercargill children - Jordan Marama McKenzie, almost 14-years old, and her two young brothers, have been spending the first days of the Christmas holidays with their ditzzy aunt in Wellington. It is time to go home for Christmas, and the children find themselves in a light aircraft, with a storm approaching, and a sudden detour over Fiordland necessary. The plane crashes, the pilot is killed, and Jordan and her brothers must survive, but these kids are urban-ites – city-bred, so where does Jordan get the information she needs about survival? The ending is absolutely brilliant. Thought it was going to be a two-hankie job, but turned into a shout-aloud "Blimey! And I never guessed!"

"The Ninth Circle" is by the author that intrigued me with "Jasmyn". It opened very promisingly with another intriguing premise: a man regains consciousness lying on a kitchen floor, amid the detritus of a DIY project gone wrong, a case full of money on the kitchen table – and absolutely no knowledge of who he is, where he is, or what the money is for. Despite some slightly creepy happenings, the first two-thirds of this book then rest entirely on 'Gabriel' establishing his own backstory in the form of a diary. Yawn. The final third has tense moments and a 'what can happen next?' feeling, but is both too fantastical in its plotting – featuring stern, cruel angels and soft-hearted, wistful demons, a virgin birth on the top of a Budapest cathedral, and so on, but is also unaccountably boring! Now how did that happen? I mean, I appreciate of bad-tempered angels! At least "Jasmyn" wasn't boring! Perhaps Alex Bell is improving as a storyteller, as "Jasmyn" appears to be her second book. I may not rush round to the Library looking for Book No. 3 though.

The Native Island rat/possum eradication trial

By Darren Peters, National Predator Officer

Looking towards the future of pest control in New Zealand, with a goal of eradicating animal pests and taking into account our evolution of thinking in this field, has led us to testing "will Goodnature automatic/resetting traps eradicate possums/rats on Native island".

Native Island is one of only three Islands in our data base that still has both possums and rats and isn't too big and has good access. After a chat with the local land owner and local DOC folk, we all decided it'd be a good start point. We chatted also to SIRCET to discuss how this project may or may not fit into their future plans too.

In November, four DOC staff from Te Anau popped down and set up the monitoring system so that we'd be able to observe the effect we have as we progress. That crew marked and set 5 random lines of 250m length each. On each of these lines are set 5 tracking tunnels to record rat activity and 25 wax tags to monitor possum activity. The results prior to setting the traps were 84% rat tracking and 57% bite mark index (BMI). The rat number is quite high and the possum number is about right for unmanaged possums.

During the week 18-22 November, a team of 10 volunteers/DOC staff marked, cut and set all the traps required for this operation. We based our grid set up on previous eradications and mainland current best practise. So there are three lines laid out like concentric circles, 100m apart with rat traps every 50m and possum traps every 150m on each line. About 146 rat traps and 44 possum traps in total.

The volunteers that helped with the set up came from Taranaki where they have all had experience with this type of work and with these traps. They hail from East Taranaki Environment Trust who run a 20000ha stoat control project for kiwi protection and 1500ha of possum and rat control for kokako reintroduction. It was so good to have these folk who understand this work and community relationships!! We also had help from two DOC experts, one from the Northern Te Urewera where we have a massive area of ecological protection at Te Urewera Mainland island, 30000ha of possum control and five core areas of rat and stoat control, and the other from Te Anau where we have multiple projects similar in goals to this.

All of the traps were set 70cm at least above ground to protect the weka and the rat traps have a little bracket under them to give ratty a platform and provide more protection for weka.

The traps were all set by the Wednesday the 20th Nov and we partially checked them on the 21st then checked all of them on the 22nd. We got round early on the 22nd, hopefully before weka got the rats and observed 44 rats under the traps, 1 quadruple, a couple triples and a few doubles - not a bad start.

We will check all the traps and prefeed between the traps each month till mid winter then review where to next. We'll monitor every 6 weeks odd too to check on our progress.

If anyone in the Halfmoon Bay community want to come on these checks you'd be welcome. Please contact Brent Beaven.

Regards Darren

Stewart Island update

Just prior to Christmas, possum contractors treated approx. 3200ha of the Anglem Coast. Possum numbers were successfully reduced to about a 2% index (our target was 5%).

The start of the Rakiura Track at Lee Bay has been re-routed and re-gravelled after storm damage caused slumping and washed away sections of the track.

The second phase of the robin transfer from Ulva Island to the DSF Reserve will occur throughout January and February. Juvenile robins will be transferred just prior to dispersal from their parent's territories.

Our hut ranger programme is in full swing with volunteer hut rangers based at Port William, Mason Bay and on Ulva Island.

We have had the benefit of having three fantastic long term volunteers helping our work programme this summer. Jake, Patrick and Abby are all spending 3-4 months gaining work experience across all of our conservation work.

A new staff member, Philippa Green, is due to start on the island at the end of January. Philippa will be managing the AirNZ sponsored trapping project from Lee Bay to Port William, as well as the Darwin's barberry eradication project.

RAKIURA MUSEUM MATTERS – by Jo Riksem

2014 has brought in a new wave of family enquires and one that was of special interest was the family of Jim Brookland. There are still people on the island who remember the Brookland family. We found out Jim used to work as a mill hand at Murdoch's Mill at Horseshoe Bay. Jim is seen here on the very far left sitting on a log. They're all sitting on logs, not surprising! There were other names given on the original photograph but with only nine names and ten men in the picture we are not sure which name goes with which person, except for Jim. Can anyone help? Other names are Charlie Mann, Gelam Cooper, Bill Witsey, George Murdoch, Dave Stott, Charles Hicks, J. Brunston (Ortwin) and Harry Swan.

Other enquires have been for early settlers Nathaniel Bates, John Hunter (boat builder) and Robert Watson (sealer). Also William Stout owner of the boat "Anna", Peter Stead who lived near Observation Rock and John Gethien Hughs who owned the boat "Mary Brilliant."

Two people have been identified in last months photograph. The lady walking behind the cart is Mateen Traill and the man driving the cart is her husband Arthur Traill Jnr.

Looking for something special of Stewart Island, we now have been able to obtain the last 20 copies of the Dorothy Jenkin booklet of her beautiful orchids. We still have copies of the DVD on Mason Bay farming which many people are enjoying.

It is getting closer to our Norwegian Weekend on the 4, 5 and 6 April. A not to be missed celebration of our Norwegian heritage on Stewart Island. You don't have to be Norwegian or have links to the Whalers Base to come along and enjoy this special event. Contact Bev or Jo at Rakiura Museum (2191-221) or email stewartislandmuseum@southlanddc.govt.nz if you have any queries or need more forms. Payment for the registration can be made by direct credit, cheque or cash. For our catering purposes it is important to get the registration forms in as soon as possible. Next time you are in town drop in to the Invercargill museum as they are having a special exhibition on whaling.

Museum hours are now October thru April Monday thru Saturday 10 am-1:30 pm and Sunday Noon-2 pm officer in the British Army for 16 years. 25 years in pastoral ministry, including parish ministry, hospital chaplaincy and army chaplaincy. During his chaplaincy

Hymn books, are a very necessary part of a church, for making a “joyful noise unto the Lord.” We recently had a lovely donation of two of the first hymn books that the church had. A little black book, it was titled “Church Praise” and first came out in 1882 with our edition 1907. As you can see someone made their mark in it, which often happens to church hymn books. The heading above was in a nice calligraphy but the printing was very tiny, squinting size. Then about the 1940s this same hymn book was taken and three other hymns were pasted in the front and back. Two of the hymns had to do with the war, a sign of the times, and the other was for the Centenary Celebrations of the Presbyterian Church in New Zealand in 1940. The next in line to the hymn book history was a thick little blue hymn book called “Scottish Psalter and Church Hymnary and Psalms” issued in 1929. Now this stayed with us for some time until some years ago we got a bigger hymn book called “With One Voice” issued in 1982. The printing on the last two hymn books got progressively bigger which was good for people who had been squinting to see the words on the first one. It’s been interesting to see how some hymns have continued all the way through the different books like “Jesus Loves Me” and how others have been added over the years. Let us know your favourite hymns or songs as we want to include favourites for our 110th Anniversary.

In 2013 the Stewart Island Fishermen's Association disbanded and the chattels and responsibilities of the Stewart Island Marine Radio (SIMR), which includes Channel 65 were handed over to the Rakiura/Stewart Island Search and Rescue (SAR) group. A sub-group has been set up, composed of emergency services representatives from the Island to continue managing SIMR ZLRZ of which Maureen Jones will remain the operator.

This service has always been provided to commercial and recreational vessels on a fee paying basis but invoices have not been sent for several years. A recent inspection of the repeater on Rakeahura showed that the batteries need to be replaced urgently, with an associated cost of approximately $5000. With other ongoing costs to operate and maintain the service, the group has been compiling user lists and sending invoices. These will be issued yearly, with the present year ending on the 30th June 2014. Fees have been set at $70 per commercial vessel/plane/helicopter and $35 per recreational user.

Please help keep this service operational by paying invoices promptly and let us know if you have not received an invoice yet.

Knit Knatter and Koffee Group will be holding its first get together of the season at the Fire Station on Tuesday 4th February, anyone interested in joining us to knit or learn to knit over a cup of coffee/tea and a chat is more than welcome.

Last year members managed a mighty heap of knitting enabling us to present a bag of goodies to each of the 12 babies which arrived during the year. Each bag also included a quilt made by the Island Quilters. A banana box full of prem. clothes was delivered to the Hospital and numerous peggy squares for Operation Cover Up.

So if you are interested in joining the group come along to the Fire Station or ring either Wendy 357 or Jenny 219.

This play has local significance as one of the young soldiers depicted is related to the Goomes family.

Shop Talk

by Jules Retberg

“Robots to work in supermarkets” was a news headline that smacked me right between the eyes recently. Grocery check out lanes and shelf stacking are likely to be the first areas we see “PR2”, the new generation of intelligent robots according to the USA’s Cornell University. Not in my lifetime, you might think - but within two years it could be a reality.

As I went about my day I began to wonder how a robot would manage a couple of days in our 4 Square Supermarket. You know, us being a quiet little place ...

PR2 doesn’t have fingers so unlocking the front door might prove a challenge but we’ll give him the benefit of the doubt and say he can get in the door!

First job: turn on the pie warmer and put the pies in without squashing them. Outside jobs: unlock the chillers, put the trolleys out, get the broom and beat yesterday’s dust and dirt off the “welcome” mat. It’s 7.20am and a customer wants to come in. You want to be helpful PR2, so turn on the lights and let the customer in. Serve the customer. Another customer sees the lights on so you’d better serve them too. Go back outside. The phone rings, go back inside and answer it. Yes we open at 7.30am every day. Even Sunday? Yes EVERY day includes Sunday! Go back outside, someone will trip over that broom if you don’t finish sweeping up, PR2. So far so good ...

How are you at writing? Check the birthdays calendar and write on the blackboard outside. Hmm, robot hands struggling with that chalk huh? Update the Lotto board, yes those little red plastic numbers, climb up and change them, oh and replace the poster while you’re up there. Oh wait, next customer. They’d like a pie, but it’s not warm enough yet. PR2 you need to go to the kitchen and microwave the pie. Stop chatting-up the microwave, PR2 and serve the customer their warm pie! Who’s next please? They’d like a pie too. They didn’t think to mention it the first time you went to the kitchen. That’s OK, just smile PR2, and go microwave another pie! What’s that? You got the microwave’s serial number already ...?!

Quiet for a few minutes? PR2 could you clean the hand prints off the glass in the entrance door. Do the same for the chiller doors, especially the drinks one as kids don’t use the handle. Ready for your next customer, PR2? Some visitors want you to recommend a nice walk for them. Suggest the day walks map available at DOC. Where is DOC? Out the door, turn right, turn right again into Main Road and you’ll see the DOC office on the left side of the road. Watch them turn left as they leave the shop. Serve customers in queue that has formed while you were being helpful, PR2.

As your colleagues start their shifts there’s more of you to work at the counter, but they also need to do the ordering for bread, milk, fruit & veggies, chilled & frozen not to mention the main grocery order. PR2 could you top up the chips and wine as they’re looking a bit empty. The ATM is empty too? OK, get onto that PR2, and no flirting with the machine while you’re there!

Yaay here are the newspapers! Put account newspapers into the slots. Write names on newspapers for non-account newspapers and keep them behind the counter, ah not so good with a pen either are we, PR2? Mr Green asked us to keep a Southland Times for him every day until further notice but hasn’t collected yesterday’s yet. Should we still keep one for him today? You decide, PR2, you’re an intelligent robot!

Have you checked the email yet PR2?? Reply to Lucy in Auckland that yes we have gluten-free bread and yes we are a real supermarket with fresh fruit, veggies, beer and wine, and no, there is not another supermarket at Christmas Village! Hmm, tricky typing with those robot hands aye?!

It’s 10.30am and the ferry’s here with our chilled and frozen load. Frozen first, let’s get them off the pallet quickly and into our freezers. Who’s doing the ice cream, quickly please PR2 before it melts! Your circuits are a little cold huh? A customer would like some mince? OK PR2, you’d better go look out the back, but don’t forget that ice cream ...

Chilled load is next, it’s about 3 pallets to unload and get on the shelf. What’s that PR2, one of the yoghurts is broken and getting into your robot joints, better clean it up before somebody slips! Could you tell Mrs Frost that we haven’t unpacked the butter yet. She’d like it now? It’s at the bottom of that next pallet so you’d better start shifting the top stuff ...

You’d better take a break, PR2, your circuits are overheating!

It’s the lunchtime rush. Sandwiches are over in the slide, sir, right where you are standing. Just slide the front and help yourself. And a coffee? Decaf, no I’m sorry. Could someone answer the phone please??? The coffee machine is broken, I’ll come down and take a look. Just press the button sir. Oh you didn’t push it hard enough, your coffee is right here. PR2 are you blushing? Just what did you think would happen if you pressed ‘espresso’?

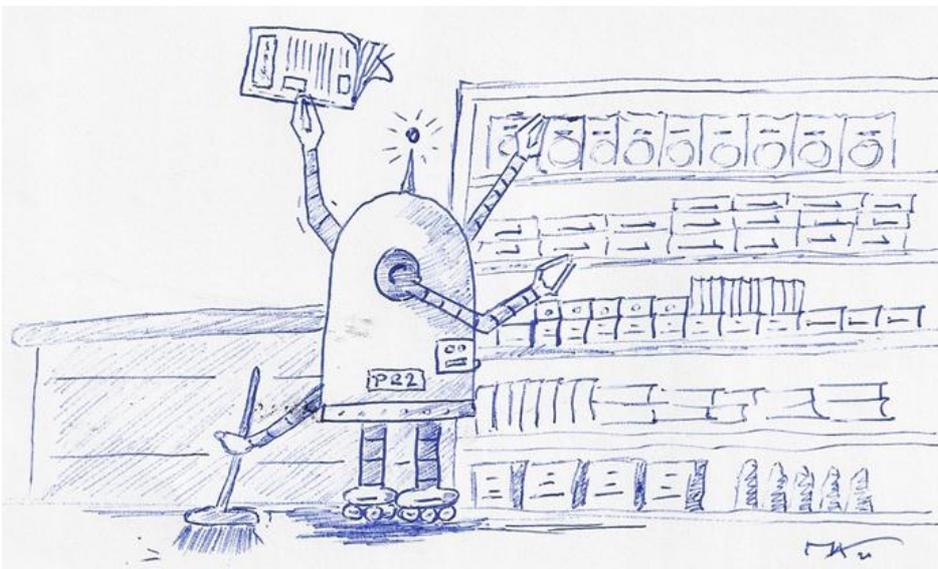

Who’s next please? We’ve sold you half a newspaper? What do you reckon, PR2? The sections, yes I see, but you can’t find section “P14”. Do you think that might mean page 14 rather than section P?? No, not silly at all madam. Next please ...

An email from Lotto? Oh a new scratchie has been launched, well you’d better deactivate the old one and activate a new one, PR2. Back at the tills ... do we have those in another flavour? PR2 will have a look out back for you. Oh I forgot, it’s a tight squeeze out there and you’re not so good at climbing over boxes. Cider for you sir, do you have some I.D. please? Well in New Zealand if you are under 25 you will be asked for I.D. regardless of the fact that you are over the age of 18. I’m just doing my job sir, you have a pleasant day! Keep smiling PR2, you’re doing well.

So what are you doing this evening PR2?

You’re going to the garage to get well and truly oiled with the ATM, the microwave and the coffee machine!! Bye then - see you tomorrow. We’ll be a bit busier as we’ve got our main grocery order coming in. About another 12 pallets ... bye!

The price of a PR2 intelligent robot is expected to be around US$300,000. Anyone that works in a shop ... priceless!
