

STEWART ISLAND NEWS

CELEBRATING RAKIURA

AUGUST—SEPTEMBER 2009

This issue is rich with history and yarns. We have the second instalment of our “new page two”, check out Now and Then. On page 3 former resident Alistair Jensen has shared a fascinating treasure with us: a glimpse into Island life during WWII. And long before Doug Beck came to Stewart Island and helped launch our Singles Ball, he was a train man in Central Otago—turn to page 7 for some really great stories from the railways.

In true tabloid style, the last issue of SIN mentioned storms, tsunamis, and earthquakes. What’s left?... Pandemic! That’s right, I’m talking about swine flu. (Which spreads faster on Stewart Island: The H1N1 virus or rumours about who might have it?) If you have any flu symptoms it is strongly advised to STAY HOME and CALL the clinic at 098, and the nurse will sort out an appointment with you. They do not want you wandering into the clinic waiting room coughing and sneezing on people and things (see p3 for more).

Onto volcanoes. In anticipation of the Te Papa exhibition this summer, your Library has two new beautiful books about Pompeii and the volcano which ruined (yet ironically preserved) the ancient city. These books are just a part of scores of new books which will be unveiled at a Library New Book party on Saturday 29th August.

One more disaster reference, a follow-up about last month’s earthquake: Fisherman Arthur White was near the epicentre off Fiordland and he and his crew looked up to see a wall of water coming at them. They decided to try to go ashore but then the shore came down into the sea next to them in a massive landslide so they head out to open ocean. That’s the most exciting quake story I’ve heard yet.

Did you know that paua hatchery/community centre manager Casey Lockwood is a basketball star? After captaining her team through Princeton University in the US, she recently led the Southland Pearls to glory. The team is now qualified to compete in the basketball open nationals in Invercargill in September.

It’s possible there won’t be an issue of SIN in September, I’ll let contributors on my email list know for certain next month. SIN subscribers: don’t be surprised if you don’t see one until October.

The community celebrated our nurse Deb Dillon’s fiftieth birthday with a party at the RSA. She was presented with a quilt made of blocks created by members of the community and sewed by Pat King and Margaret Rooney. Various blocks from the quilt are pictured throughout this issue.

Finally, we were saddened to learn that our friend Alun John Evans passed away. He died aboard his home the Secret while it was anchored at Millar’s Beach. Alun, originally from Wales, was once a merchant seaman. Before he came down here he lived on the West Coast and in Riverton. Alun was an affable, sometimes philosophical man who loved the sea and led a mostly solitary life on the Secret. He is survived by two sisters and a brother in the UK. Many of us got to know Alun over the years and he will be missed; we’ll think of him whenever we see the Secret.

Dylan Thomas, the famous Welsh poet, wrote And death shall have no dominion. Dead men naked they shall be one With the man in the wind and the west moon; When their bones are picked clean and the clean bones gone,

They shall have stars at elbow and foot;

Though they go mad they shall be sane,

Though they sink through the sea they shall rise again Though lovers be lost love shall not;

And death shall have no dominion.

Bayview Guesthouse

Built around 1870 the large two-storied boarding house Bayview was one of the many enterprises established by Robert Scollay who was one of the first to take up a section at the head of Halfmoon Bay where our township is today. Earlier Halfmoon Bay settlers lived out at Harrold and Leask Bay.

Born in Lerwick, Shetland Islands in 1833 Robert Scollay went to sea as a fourteen year old and came to New Zealand in 1857 with his wife on the Queen of Perth. He was involved in bringing machinery for the first timber mill on Stewart Island in 1861 but didn't move to settle in Halfmoon Bay until 1865. Scollay operated a smithy and boat building enterprise on and in front of the site, which is now Stewart Island Flights Centre. Like many of our large early wooden guest houses Bayview burnt down in 1911 or 1912. (E.Willa). The Scollays had a large family of 10 children and some of their descendants the Hansen and Squires families still live on the Island today.

The 9 or so boats built by Robert Scollay feature in the Stewart Island Boats book.

Scollay left his mark on Stewart Island with Scollay Rocks out in front of the slipway in Halfmoon Bay being named for him as well as Scollay Flat in the Pegasus area of the Tin Range.

Some Memories of an Early Childhood on Stewart Island During World War II

by Alistair Jensen

Like many children of the 1930s I was born in Invercargill to a Stewart Island couple. My father was a fisherman and part of an old established island family.

We lived in a number of homes during pre-school days but among my fondest recollections was the time spent at Moturau Moana, where dad was caretaker for some years. Archie Johnson and Joe Carstensen were regular workers at Moturau and our families were quite close.

From here I started school in 1940 in the old building by the road with Mae Bragg being responsible for my early security getting to and from school. This was quite interesting since her older brother was one of the many boys who took some of their wartime anger out on me. Having German-Scandinavian ancestry was no advantage at that time.

The envisaged Japanese invasion fleet caused great consternation and most families had “air raid shelters” and hidden refuges stocked up with supplies. Zigzag trenches were dug behind the school building and we had frequent school evacuation drills whereby pupils exited the rooms via windows at rear of building, moved quickly down trenches, thence to our “refuge” at Fern Gully. All in all it was quite exciting and made a change from lessons.

We learned to swim with the school at either Bathing Beach or Thule Back Beach, and play-times were mainly spent playing “force back” in front of the school with “hockey sticks” from the bush, and balls from carved bull kelp. Only when the tide was suitable of course.

There was no licensed hotel so all social gatherings were in the old hall with the engine thumping away to produce power.

Boat day was the big occasion each week and most islanders walked around to meet the ferry — Tamatea, Orewa and Wairua I being the ones during my time. Speaking of which, time meant little in our lives and weekdays were referred to as “day before boat day” or “day after!” Everyone knew what we intended.

Footwear was for very best, church etc so it was mainly bare-foot to school.

It was an idyllic start to life on an island I will ever keep dear. We made all our own fun and enjoyed life to the full.

Stewart Island Community Centre

Job Vacancy

We are looking for a Manager for the Stewart Island Community Centre. The part-time position will start on 1st December. Responsibilities include membership enquiries, bookings, accounts and general bookwork. Average 8 hours per week. If you are interested please contact Hilli Maass-Barrett - ph2191040 or Margaret Hopkins - ph 2191126.

Trustee Vacancies

We need 2 enthusiastic, community-minded people to join our Trust to help administer the Stewart Island Community Centre. We are very lucky to have such a wonderful facility in a township of our size. If you think you have some spare time, great ideas and enthusiasm for helping to shape the direction that our Trust goes in with regard to the future of the Community Centre then contact Hilli or Margaret. Our facility is now valued at over $4m and thanks to the dedicated team we have had on our Trust we continue to have a sound financial base with steady bookings as well as regular local use.

SWINE FLU

Unless a doctor takes a swab, sends it to a lab for analysis and makes an official diagnosis, it's not clear who has “the swine” and who has the “regular flu” as the symptoms are much the same and individuals react differently to bugs. The actual number of swine flu victims in

Southland (and this island) is unknown as many doctors aren't doing specific tests for H1N1 ...one Invercargill doctor said he's just treating people for their flu symptoms and assuming that half the patients have the swine flu virus, but he's not bothering to document the stats. Whether it is swine flu or “regular flu” they are both contagious and nasty bugs. If you have any flu symptoms it is strongly advised to STAY HOME and CALL the clinic at 098, and the nurse will sort out an appointment with you. They do not want you wandering into the clinic waiting room coughing and sneezing on people and things. If possible, please refrain from wandering around the post office, shop and other public venues coughing and sneezing on people. If you have to go out and you're sick (or you're healthy but have to hang around someone who is sick), the clinic has masks available and it's not silly to wear one (think of it as a tribute to the late Michael Jackson). Washing your hands frequently is a good idea. Call the clinic with any questions.

DOC Spot

by Sharon Pasco

Field Centre Supervisor / PM Community Relations

The past month has seen a number of new staff join the team on Stewart Island, although technically speaking not all are 'new' as one of our newbies includes Emma Hopkins, who has been working for us here in a temporary capacity, on and off, for the past three years, but we are very pleased to welcome Emma onto the permanent staff in the community relations team, working mainly in the visitor centre and with visiting schools. 'New' faces to introduce to the community include Daniel Cumming who has taken over the role of Ranger - Animal Threats from Letitia McRitchie (Letitia has stepped up to the Programme Manager Biodiversity position for the year that Brent Beaven is on secondment as National Hunting Advisor), Al Check who is leading the weeds projects and Eigell Wahlberg who has been appointed to a team leader role with the biodiversity team. To help you get to know them a little better I have asked each to write a brief profile to include in this column over the next few issues. As Al has moved to the island with his wife Tania and three small boys, it is probably fitting that his is the first to be featured.

Introducing the Check

Family - If you have seen three new boys around the neighbourhood recently you're not mistaken. Yes that's right 3 more boys, sorry no girls, to add to the school and rug rats rolls. Al & Tanya Check and their children; Billy (6), Jamie (4) and Jordan (2) arrived a week ago. Al has taken up a contract position with DOC looking after the Stewart Island weed programmes. And Tanya has a background in Apple Mac computers, much to the delight of Kath at school, and no doubt other Mac users on the island. Previously from Leeston in Canterbury, the Check family is very excited about the prospect of exploring this unique and special place. "The community has been so friendly and helpful since we arrived. People have gone out of their way to make us feel welcome, we really appreciate that. We look forward to being part of this community and getting to know people here." Al and Tan are keen on getting the boys out on 'missions'. "The kids are just loving it here. They are happy at school, and love the beach and bush missions. And with a taste of blue cod already they are all lining up to get amongst the fishing."

Update on the development of the new Conservation Management Strategy for Stewart Island / Rakiura, and Rakiura National Park Management Plan - Seven out of the nine hearings have been heard for the Rakiura planning process. The remaining two are to be held in Invercargill and on Stewart Island / Rakiura on the 17th and 24th of August respectively. Hearings are progressing well with a variety of views being discussed between the hearing panel and submitters. Submissions and hearings are being considered and changes will be drafted into the two planning documents over the next few months. The two drafts will then be sent to the Southland Conservation Board for their consideration and following this will be sent to the New Zealand Conservation Authority for their consideration and approval.

Photocopying/Laminating - As staff have had a couple of unpleasant encounters recently with members of the public wanting to use the DOC photocopier and/or laminator, I thought it may help prevent any future misunderstanding if I made it clear the department's position on such services. The department is aware that on Stewart Island there is no business that offers photocopying or laminating and is therefore happy to continue to provide this service to residents on a cost recovery basis, provided it doesn't interfere with day-to-day work. The photocopier doubles as the main printer for the office and is located, with the fax machine and laminator, in an area of the office where often highly confidential papers are waiting to be uplifted by staff. It is therefore not appropriate to allow the general public into this area. Any requests for photocopying/laminating for the public will only be done at the staff's convenience and residents are asked to respect the fact that if they want to prevail of this service they may be asked to leave the items to be copied/laminated at the front counter and return to collect them later in the day.

Rat Deaths Reported

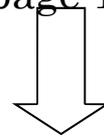

250 rats down! We have been madly trapping this last month as many of you know. Big thanks to all the volunteers who contributed to the 250 rats caught. This was part of our rat 'contingency plan' to tackle extra high rat numbers as a result of the rimu trees fruiting this year. We have now decided to move onto Stage 3 of our rat 'contingency plan' as discussed at our community meeting in June, in order to further attack rat numbers before the birds start to breed in spring. In the next month you will see the pre-feed bait stapled to trees in the Ackers Peninsula area, this will be followed by two rounds of cholecalciferol (Vitamin D) laced bait. If anyone is having problems with rats – we can help! If you live in the area from Golden Bay Road out to Ackers Peninsula we will provide traps and even check them for you. Outside this area, we are happy to provide traps at cost price or advise on bird friendly toxins. We hope this extra effort will help the bird breeding season, and we are looking forward to spring and seeing more birds around again. Kaka are already back to tap on your windows. In the next couple of months we can expect little blue penguins and tītī to be coming ashore to pick their burrows and do some snuggling...

For help with rats, contact Jessi: jessi@sircet.org.nz or phone 219 1291

Island Beat

Concerning is the number of Diesel and Fuel thefts occurring over the last couple of months. These offences are eroding the security and quality of life people have on this island. This has caused Islanders to look sideways at each other and unfortunately think more about the security of their property. I believe we have the opportunity to defend our relatively crime free lifestyle on this island. If you see something suspicious or have any information about these thefts or any other offending give me a call.

Crime

- Between the 25 of June and the 6th of July 300 litres of Diesel has been stolen from a Peterson Hill address.
- Between the 16th of June and the 02nd of July 100 litre of Diesel has been taken from a Whipp place address.
- Between the 1st of June and the 10th of July 25 litres of petrol was drained from a container on a boat parked on the side of the road in Kamahi Road. A second 20 litre container and petrol was also taken from the boat.

- On the 6th of August the South Seas Hotel was broken into and a Duvet was stolen. A 17 year old Wyndham youth was arrested for the Burglary and will be appearing in the Invercargill District Court on the 1st of September

In May a 1 ¼ inch red Crowbar valued at $150.00 was reported as stolen from a section in Miro Crescent. This has now been found at the same location. It was uncovered by the recent rains after being run over and pushed into the Mud.

Traffic

Over the last two months there have been three reported minor crashes on the island. In two of these crashes alcohol was a contributing factor. It is obvious 'the don't drink and drive message' is being ignored by a few people.

As a result I will be targeting drink drivers.

Statement regarding i-Site Closure

The extent of the Trust's financial difficulties were highlighted when work was being undertaken recently to prepare its annual accounts.

I am a chartered accountant with the Southland District Council and was asked by the Trust to have an initial review of the I-Site financial information. It quickly became apparent that they were in serious financial difficulties. The commission income received by the I-Site was insufficient to meet the costs of running the I-site making the Trust effectively insolvent.

Tim Ward, a Chartered Accountant with BDO Spicers a prominent Invercargill accounting firm, has now been appointed by the Trust as liquidator. He has a list of all I-Site creditors and their details.

Tim will shortly contact all known creditors to establish claims against the remaining money the Trust has in the bank. Initial indications are that once liquidation costs, outstanding wages, pay etc are paid there will be little remaining to meet creditor claims.

If you have any questions about the above please let me know.

A good reason to fire your chicken-sitter. Philippa and Ian arrived home from holiday to find this in their fridge.

Letter to the Editor

Having visited your stunning island in January this year I now subscribe to your great little newsy newsletter so that every month or so when I find it in my letterbox the wonderful memories I have of our stay can come flooding back to me !

...I had been meaning to write to thank you but I have been more motivated this time when I read about the closure of your info centre! I felt really sad about this. O my goodness I just don't know what we would have done without them! They were fantastic and did all our accom and ferry bookings for us it was an absolutely amazing service, we were so appreciative of their fabulous work! I really think we would have floundered without their help. We were able to rent a house and I don't know how we would have got on to that without them. I remember I looked at the computer site but found it a little disjointed and perhaps not as in-depth as I would have like it to be. I think what people are going to have to do now is list themselves and everything they offer on that site. I really knew very little about Rakiura except I did know about the tramping tracks and how muddy they can be (the news of Rakiura's infamous mud has travelled far and wide!)

Anyway you lot are going to have to work together on this one and be very proactive to keep on marketing yourselves to the world so you can keep that tourist dollar coming in. Because of your small population I don't believe you need to worry about competition from your 'neighbour' because basically you all offer something different and every visitor is going to have different needs- eg we were a family and decided we would rent a house for a week, but if I was on my own I would have gone to a backpackers, or if it was just my husband and I maybe we would have stayed at the hotel for a bit of a change. What about the fishing trips—the prices may vary slightly but what is offered is different and people will gravitate to what suits them best, and maybe next time they will try the other trip! Same goes for the Kiwi encounters (I think there is more than one of these trips on offer) etc. There should be enough tourist dollars for everybody, and if you don't think you are getting your fair share then maybe you have to evaluate what you might not be doing right etc etc, that is the other side to the coin. As a tourist I like to have all the options made available to me, I don't like to feel that I am being deprived of information, and obviously this is what your I-site was there to do and of course to do it impartially.

...Before I sign off I just must say this. I know we live in one of the most beautiful and unspoilt countries in the world, you just ask any immigrant and they will tell you this, but sometimes like everyone else I get a little complacent and start to lose site of this fact, but when we went to Rakiura this year, each and every day we were there I was reminded that paradise does truly exist and it was right there on my doorstep and how lucky I was to be able to experience it when I know so many people will never have that privilege.

Reminiscing About the Central Otago Railway

by Doug Beck

I was born in Ranfurly, in 1961, raised in Oturehua where my father worked on the railway. We lived right beside the railway line and the Ida Burn Dam. I remember one day, jumping off the jigger. I slipped and my leg went under it, crushing my leg when the jigger ran over it. It must have been my lucky day because there wasn't a cut or even a scratch but I was bruised. Apparently Mum heard about the accident on the radio. Goodness knows what she heard because she came rushing out, grabbing me and taking me to the hospital.

The doctors at the hospital were amazed my leg wasn't crushed or worse, chopped off.

One day Dad got a bit drunk and thought he would take the jigger to the pub. I remember it was about 1963-64. He drove the jigger up to the road rail crossing, putting it onto the road where he dropped the clutch, jumped on to the back and drifts it off to the pub. Meanwhile, Mum is out the front yelling, 'You mad bastard..'. He just laughed and waved as he went by! It still makes me laugh to think about it.

Did you know Oturehua is one of the coldest places in New Zealand? I remember in the winter time going with Mum and Dad up to the Ida burn Dam to watch Dad curling. I loved playing in the snow even though I got wet and cold. Mum told me that it was Dad who introduced Pheasants to that area. He liked to hunt them at the dam and sometimes Mum would just go out the back door, grab a pheasant, ring its neck, pluck it and then cook it. I remember it always tasted pretty good. Mum was known to take the jigger trolley to the shop. She did this often. The local shop was owned by the Gilchris and is still in the family to this day.

—Dad got a bit drunk and thought he would take the jigger to the Pub—

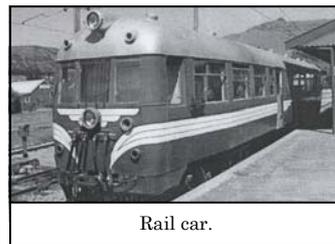

The old steam trains were a wonder to behold back then and when I heard one coming I would run outside and wave to the driver as he blasted his whistle as he went past. I love the sound of the steam train and whistle; and awesome piece of our history. Sometimes the train would stop at our door, pick us kids up and go cruising. We would sometimes be picked up and taken to Dunedin for the day to go shopping. Sometimes we went on the steam train to the railway picnics. They were awesome picnics. Who would stand up front and blow the whistle, me!

—my mates and I would put coins on the railway track to let the train run over and flatten them. One time we put .22 bullets under the wheels—moved to Alexandra on the steam train. As usual, I was up the front of the train blowing the whistle when the driver told me to. One time when I was blowing the whistle the driver told me to stop but I couldn't, because I was hanging out the window! He had to reach over and haul me back in again. That was the last time I hung out the window. In Alexandra we lived beside the railway yard and had heaps of fun playing around the station, the yard and climbing around the railway wagons and sheep yards.

Rail car.

When they used to do the fruit run I loved watching the trucks roaring around and the wagons crashing about.

It was a very busy place. The train would blast its whistle as it went into the railway yard. By the time they shunted all the wagons around and hooked up, the length of the train would block the town off. There would be three engines and around 70 – 100 wagons shunted backwards and forwards to let the traffic through.

As I grew up, my mates and I would put coins on the railway

In late 1965, when I was about four and a half, we track to let the train run over and flatten them. One time we put .22 bullets under the wheels (stupid!) we would go and hide under the road rail bridge to watch it go over the top. Sometimes we would take the train out to the Manorburn Dam to go ice skating. Life was carefree and fun. I remember one time a lady (I wont mention names) didn't hear the train coming. The train whistle was blowing but she didn't hear it. The driver threw the brakes on but it takes a while to stop a train... crunch! It slid all the way up to our house. I could just stand there. What a mess. Mum raced to call the ambulance as soon as she heard the crash. She knew instinctively what had happened.

Sometimes coming back from a trip to Dunedin for the day we would be coming round a bend and find sheep on the track. The driver would say, 'Hit the whistle' again, then, 'chops, anyone?'. My mate and I would sometimes go to work with Dad. I would ask, 'what are we doing today, Dad?' He would say, 'Grab a shovel, son'. I would ask, why and he would say, 'We have got to clean these sheep up. What a mess'. They would stink as they baked in the sun. We would go with him and the boys on the jiggers if they were 'packing the tracks', which means, lifting the tracks. Jimmy and I would sit on the little flat deck with the gravel, singing songs and hitting old paint tins like drums.

Going on the train through the tunnels was cool. Up through the Poolburn Gorge, over the viaduct and down the hill at a 100 miles an hour. The parties, the singsongs they would have were great with music coming from guitars, ukuleles, a harmonica and the spoons.

Ye Old Railcar used to run through to Dunedin and back and was fun to travel on. I remember my sister and I were up front with the driver one night heading back to Alexandra. I was on the brakes and she was on the horn and the driver was on the gas. Over the hill onto the Galloway straight he gave it some gas. Off we went, flat stick. What's that?, I say He looks and asks Sharon to hit the horn again, again and again. It's a cattle beast, what do I do? Hit the brakes. The driver says to hang on and he hits the gas again and now we are flying. Sharon keeps hitting the horn.

Dad is having a few drinks and he doesn't know what's happening. The cattle beast starts walking off the track but not quickly enough because we hit it around its back end. The contact shakes the railcar and Dad spills his beer, he opens the door and he asks what the hell we are up to. We told him what had happened. Oh, OK. We are still on the tracks, so that's a good thing.

When it was time to take the railcar off the tracks, Dad and I were sitting on the porch watching it on its last trip out of Alexandra. Dad said, 'Watch this'. He goes up to the trolley shed, comes back out and walks up to and around the railcar. People start asking, 'What are you doing?' and he replies, 'Making sure you don't have a 'hot box'(wheel bearings). Unbeknown to everyone, he is actually putting detonators under the wheels of the railcar. He walks back home with a smile on his face. He told me what he had done so we walked over to the fence. The driver yells, 'all aboard', as he gives us the thumbs up as he pulls on the horn. The horn goes, toot , toot and about the same time there's also a boom, boom. All that was visible was half the railcar. Dad was called into the office the next day to explain himself. He said, 'Who cares, you wont see this thing again'. He looked at the boys, 'Come on, we've work to do'. On the way out they all patted him on the back. Good on ya George.

It was a sad day the day the steam train ended its service, but it was out with the old and in with the diesel train. All that power. It would make the ground vibrate and when it went past home, it felt like it would come through the front door. We wondered what sort of fun we could have with these new trains.. We went for rides in the guard’s van to Ranfurly then would jump on the returning train and head back home, in the engine with the guard and stopping at a few pubs on the way. These things look easy to drive, and they were.

I’m not sure when I started work on the railway but I started in Invercargill, then transferred to Alexandra. I had heaps of fun booze cruising in the guard’s van up to Ranfurly then swap trains and get in the engine with the driver and his offsider, the guard, four or five mates and myself. Someone would say, ‘Let’s do a pub crawl’. One night we stopped in Omakau and went off to the pub and had a few. The driver was having a snooze in the chair when the door burst open. ‘Who the hell is driving this train?’, someone asked ‘because you are blocking the bloody road’. We looked out the door. Oops! We had parked the train across the road and had just walked down the road to the pub. Cars were backed up everywhere. We couldn’t stop laughing! ‘OK, I will shift it. Sorry, bud’ I backed it up to the right side of the road but I still had to drive it to Alexandra until the driver sobered up. We didn’t let him drink any more.

Thinking back to those days, we did some pretty stupid things. We tell cars and trucks not to play with trains. I guess all good things come to an end. Some of the passenger trains that used to come from Dunedin to Alexandra had 12, 15 and sometimes 20 wagons full of people bringing them to the Alexandra Blossom Festival. My mates and I would have a few drinks with some of them then it was time to go. Some hung out of the train and waved as it left.

The last Blossom Festival train, Dad and I thought, ‘Oh, bugger it’, so off to the trolley shed we went and found a tin of detonators or two. When we were asked what we were doing, we told the driver the same old story, checking the wheels to make sure he didn’t have a hot box. We shared the detonators, twelve each and we calmly walked down the track putting out the detonators under the wheels, before giving the driver the old thumbs up. We went back to leaning on the fence and Mum, who was on the porch and watching us, asked what we were up to. We said ‘Nothing, Mum’. The guard gave the driver the OK and the driver gave one back on the train. There were another couple of bursts on the horn then the train inched forward before, boom, boom, boom again. We had a tear in our eyes! It did look good in all that smoke. I can stand on that track today, where it all happened and see it plain as day. And yes, Monday morning...’Hey you two. Get into the office’. All we could do was grin.... ‘What’s the problem Boss?’ ‘You know what’..... ‘OK, what’s the punishment?’ He just shakes his head and said, ‘Good on yous... I had hoped you would have done that. I wished I was there to see it. Now get out of here and do some work’.

I treasure the memories of the train trips through the Cromwell Gorge and the view down to the old Clutha River, the road I used to race on at night. You could see cars coming and slow down. I was on the last jigger with Dad and the boys collecting mileage pegs. It was a sad day. That part of the line was closed so they had to do something with Clyde. They closed the old railway yard and built a new one. I helped build it. Later they closed it too then they built the Clyde Dam. Now it is part of the Central Otago Rail trail. The spectacular views from Alexandra right through to Dunedin include gorges, viaducts, rivers, tunnels and towns.

I wasn't on the Railways when they closed it from Alexandra through to Middlemarch, but I could hear Dad and the other men who worked on and built this piece of history turning in their graves. If you go to Alexandra museum and ask to see information on the railways, you will find photos of me and the family, working in the yard and out on the tracks. I still have stuff to take up to the museum to give them and to name the people in the photographs.

nickname: All c..k and no brains!

Working on the Railways would be one of the best jobs I've had, getting called out to derailments at all hours of the night, tracks expanding and twisting and floods. Dad would be called to the Galloway Bridge just below the Manorburn Dam, watching the water lapping the bridge, when he heard this almighty crash. He looks up at this wall of water coming towards him. He just bolted for the hill and watched as this wall of water rushed past, ripping out 100 meters of track. When the water went down, we couldn't find much of the track left.

When my mates and I walked to Poolburn Gorge through the tunnels, if there was a train coming we would lie flat on the ground next to the tracks, until it passed over us. I'm sure the driver didn't see us because there would have been a lot of strife if he did.

I watched as my brother and Graham Hastie built the clock on the hill in Alexandra. Its possible to sit up at the clock in a tee shirt and it would be freezing down below in Alexandra. The hore frosts are extremely cold but also beautiful. We would go swimming mid winter in the flooded Manuherikia River. It was nuts, but we had a bonfire going to warm us —this wall of water rushed past,

These days with the rail track gone, it has become the Cental Otago Rail Trail; a five day cycle tour over some of the most spectacular scenery in the country. Anyone interested in further information can go to the Alexandra Museum and ask for the information on Cental Otago Railways that I have donated to the museum.

One day in the middle of winter, we were working on the bridge just out of Lauder at the start of the Poolburn Gorge with ice and snow everywhere. The boys were dropping tools off the bridge into the river. The problem was we needed the tools to finish the job so the train could come through. Dad said, 'OK. Who's going to go and get them?' The boys weren't keen. The water was freezing but I said I would go get them. The boys told me I was nuts.

I tied a rope to a fish plate and dropped it in front of the tools so I could find them. So I stripped off to my undies and stepped backwards off the bridge. It would have been thirty to forty foot drop the river, and the water was bloody freezing. I dropped the tools and headed straight to the fire where Harry had a blanket and a hot cuppa ready for me. Dad walked up with my clothes and told Harry to get me to the pub quick. I was just about a popsicle... Tell Fritz to fill him full of rum. It definitely warmed me up and I don't remember getting back on the bus and heading home. The boys gave me a

To the Parents and Community of Stewart Island Early Childhood Centre

These are the findings of the Education Review Office's latest report on Stewart Island Early Childhood Centre.

The Stewart Island early childhood centre, known as "RugRats", is the only preschool service on the island. It is located at the primary school but managed as a separate non-profit-making trust. The centre committee has stable membership and has worked hard to promote the centre and provide a good quality education service for the local children. The committee appointed an early childhood qualified teacher to run the centre about 12 months ago. The centre is licensed to provide half-day education and care four days a week for 20 children in a mixed-age-group-setting.

The focus of this review is the quality of education. This covers the quality of the programme, learning environment, interactions and the way these contribute to children's learning and development. As with all early childhood services currently being reviewed, ERO is investigating how the centre provides for Māori children. The review also covers aspects of health and safety.

Since the last review, the centre parents and teacher have made significant improvements to the quality of the environment and programme. They work as an effective team to provide the best education and care possible for the children attending. They have developed shared beliefs about the centre's function and purpose and have systems in place that support them toward achieving their aims.

Children and their families enjoy caring, affirming, respectful relationships with one another. The teacher works closely with parents. She has a vision for the centre and is committed to continuously improving outcomes for children. There is an expectation that parents help at the centre. The teacher and management committee have established clear roles and responsibilities and effective communication systems for sharing information.

Children's interests are catered for through a wide range of opportunities for learning. Displays and resources are attractively presented to attract their interest. New Zealand's bicultural heritage is reflected well through books, puzzles, posters and props and the teachers use of some te reo Māori. Children enjoy experimenting with a range of good quality equipment and resources that promote and extend learning and development across the mix of ages. The environment has a strong focus on the natural world. The outdoor area has been recently developed and reflects features of the local environment. Children also enjoy opportunities for excursions in and around the community. The teacher is actively seeking to understand and teach the local history. She makes regular links to family and community life through the programme activities and interactions with children.

The teacher and parents have made good progress in understanding and implementing self review. Parents are enthusiastic about improving the service and often participate in professional development opportunities. Recent review has resulted in positive outcomes for children and changes in teaching practice. The teaching team now need to widen the scope of review to include how effectively interactions and teaching practices build on children's learning.

Future Action

ERO is confident that the service is being managed in the interests of the children. Therefore ERO is likely to review the service again as part of the regular review cycle.

When ERO has reviewed an early childhood centre we encourage management to inform their community of any follow up action they plan to take. You should talk to the management or licensee if you have any questions about this evaluation, the full ERO report or their future intentions.

If you would like a copy of the full report, please contact the centre or see the ERO website, <http://www.ero.govt.nz>.

TV One's new Monday night series South stars Bluffy Marcus Lush and follows him on various adventures around Southland. The program kicked off with Stewart Island and featured Robyn Jones and his tipis, and Tim Te Aika at Mason Bay.

Watch out for the Maritime Crew of Auckland, coming to Stewart Island on November 18th for their first Southern tour! This is New Zealand's only group specialising in Sea Shanties and Seafaring Songs. They will be promoting their New CD "Catlins Bound" a collection of songs about the ships built on Stewart Island and in the Catlins by William McPhee. More details in October

Stewart Island Senior Citizens

by Jenny Gell

The Senior Citizens enjoyed a mid winter luncheon at the hotel on 15th July.

After drinks and a catch up, everyone was entertained by the singing of Veda and John Kellock along with April Fisher and Glenda Whyte, kindly organised by Hazel Cowley who is President of Southland Women's Club.

Ewan thanked our guest singers for coming, the staff of the South Seas

Hotel, Vicki for generously allocating money from the Sunday Quiz night and for our members turning up. Ronny Waddell who sadly passed away on 17th June was remembered.

As usual the food was great and the company exceptional. Lil Skipper was asked to draw the winning tickets which resulted in 1st Prize of $100.00 Ship to Shore voucher to Jenny and Ewan
2nd prize of $50 Ship to Shore voucher to Steph Clarke 3rd prize of $25 Ship to Shore voucher to Wayne Bowman.

Thanks to everybody involved in organising the event and roll on December for the Christmas edition.

Winter, A Time to Read – Your Old Books!

by Sue Ford

Sorry Jess, I've been spring cleaning so haven't had time to get to the Library recently. Early for spring cleaning you think? No, because the first place I start on is my not-nearly-big-enough bookcase with its double rows and stacks of books. Each year, I start to clean by taking out a double row of books, dust the wall behind, polish the shelf, dust the first book, and then – well, I read the book. Cleaning this way takes most of the year, and I finish off the bookshelf in time to devote three or four days to spring cleaning the rest of the house. For those of you with bookshelves full of books you may have forgotten about, I can heartily recommend that you have another look – there's no telling what treasures you may find.

Since I began spring cleaning – about October 2008 – I've read "What Katy Did" and "What Katy Did Next" by Susan Coolidge, the Louisa May Alcott's, plus "Anne of Green Gables" and a raft of Victorian children's books, all taking me back to a time when school holidays were so long and hot that I read all I could get my hands on in order to fill up the empty hours (well, my memory paints it that way).

I moved on to the crime fiction shelf and had an Agatha Christie-fest, followed by a selection of Ngaio Marsh, then read myself through the decades to P.D.

James. There followed the more classical shelves, and I read Mrs. Gaskell's "Cranford", the Brontes, Henry James, Jeffrey Farnol, Stendahl, Victor Hugo, Thackeray, Dickens, Eliot, Wells, and finished with "Three Men in a Boat" by Jerome K. Jerome – what you might call somewhat eclectic.

I'm now getting dangerously close to "Modern Welding Techniques", "Hydroponic Tomato Growing" and "Modern Refrigeration". Cleaning moves on very quickly when I reach those shelves, so I should be ready to spring clean the rest of the house – by spring. When else?

The pick of the bunch then, favourite reads so far? Maybe Sam Bourne's "The Last Testament" for a thriller involving contemporary Middle-Eastern politics and an ancient letter, written in stone. I think I might prefer Sam Bourne to Dan Brown (but I haven't got to the shelf with the Dan Brown on it yet). Or Le Carre's "The Little Drummer Girl", also a gripping thriller about the Middle East, but set some years before the Bourne book. For a change of pace, what about "The Circle & The Cross" by Caiseal Mor? Set in fifth-century Ireland, it is a mixture of history and myth, fact and fiction, supernatural assistance and bloody conquest. It follows the early years of the arrival of Christianity in Ireland, and the Druidic response to this new and brutal religion as practised by some of the early "brothers".

Or Jeffrey Archer's "First Among Equals". I don't think this is his best book but is still an excellent read. I had to keep reminding myself that it was fiction, it is so carefully blended in with fact. Dealing with the rise, the fall and the rise again, of four young men of the 1960's in the world of British politics, and ending in 1991 - a good seven years after the book was published! Because Archer was wildly out in his guess of what would happen between 1984 and 1991, the ending is somewhat surreal, but it could so nearly have worked out this way ...

Now, which shelf needs dusting this week? The one devoted to poetry and Shakespeare? Or is it time to tackle the shelf of Catherine Gaskin?

Search & Rescue

Block Training 18 - 21 September 09

We are looking at having two Trainers from SARINZ come to the Island to run 2x two day courses. The first, running 18th & 19th September, will be Track and Clue Awareness. The second, running 20th & 21st September, will be Search Methods.

Although we have had reasonable numbers attending our monthly training courses, anyone who has watched an episode of "Missing" on tv realises that there are some quite specialised skills which could well mean the difference between life and death in some situations. Although we appreciate offers of "if you really need someone call on me" we really need to be able to field people with the best possible skills.

These courses will take some commitment - four days training is a reasonably big ask. However, we need to have eighteen people willing and able so this proposed training can go ahead. Both courses count towards a Certificate in Search & Rescue, and have attached NZQA unit standards if you wish to increase your qualifications.

At this stage we are asking for expressions of interest so we can commit to the planning that this training will need.

Please e-mail/phone Kirsten (309) to register, or speak to Andrew King or Dale Jenkins if you have any questions.

Please help make this training successful

Halfmoon Bay School Trip to Invercargill

by Ann Pullen

I was lucky enough to be the Parent (Grandparent) help on a recent trip with the senior school children when they went to Invercargill.

It started (for me) what seemed like in the middle of the night, (the bonus of being retired is I don't have to get up in the morning until it is light!!!) and away we went on the ferry, we were so lucky it was a calm crossing. Ms Johnson, 7 pupils and myself were off on an action packed day.

First stop was at Stadium Southland, where there was an hour's tuition on ball handling skills for Basketball. I must say I was very impressed with how well the children did, and what a great facility Stadium Southland is, there was a few firsts for me with this trip, and going to the stadium was one of them.

Next it was to the Civic Theatre to the "Capital E" Show, which had 4 very talented young actors entertaining for an hour, the name of the show was "stealing games" with the actors changing rolls from being a child one minute, to business manager, to news reader, plus a few others.

Not only were we the first school to be lead into the theatre, and so had front row seats, after the show Halfmoon Bay pupils were the only pupils to stay and talk to the actors, it was a real privilege for the children to feel so special, talking to, and having photos taken with the actors, director, and stage manager. Had we of had more time there could have been a behind the scene tour of the theatre as well, next time perhaps. "Capital E" is partly financed from Te Papa, and Wellington City Council, and they travel round the country entertaining children.

Next stop was the Museum, a quick lunch before a guided tour of the museum and of course to check up on the Tuataras, Henry plus his babies, were very co-operative and much enjoyed by us all.

Last stop we went to the pool for an hour's swimming, once again the children had a special treat as staff put the hydro slide on for half an hour, just for Halfmoon Bay pupils.

By this time there were some very tired children travelling back to Bluff and another calm crossing. I am quite sure all the Children had a great day, and I sure know that I did, I felt very privileged to have been asked to accompany the children, and all parents should be proud of their offspring in the way they behaved.

Boat stuff

Right: McLachlan tows a sinking Pounawea toward Horseshoe Beach.

First order of business: PARTY TIME!!! We are having a “do” to celebrate the addition of over 50 new books to our collection.

Please come by the Library between 11am and 1pm on Saturday August 29th.

Here’s a taste of what you will soon find on our shelves:

New Zealand history

Diggers Hatters & Whores: the New Zealand Gold Rushes by Stevan Eldred-Grigg;

Always the Sound of the Sea—the Daily Lives of New Zealand Lighthouse Keepers by Helen Beaglehole; Hell or High Water: New Zealand Merchant Seafarers Remember the War by Neil Atkinson

Popular Fiction

The latest novels by James Patterson, Nora Roberts, Tess Gerritsen, Judith Lennox, and John Connelly and for all you Captain Kydd fans we have the two latest by Julian Stockwin. We also have the very popular Eat Pray Love by Elizabeth Gilbert who also wrote Stern Men, a romantic comedy set on a lobster boat.

Other fascinating books include Bodies from the Ash—photographs of the plaster casts of the victims of Mount Vesuvius which erupted in August 79AD destroying the city of Pompeii. Crossing the Ditch tells the tale of the two Ozzies who were the first to successfully cross the Tasman by kayak. And we have a beautiful edition of Dante’s Divine Comedy illustrated by Gustave Dore.

Our latest DVD doco Man on Wire tells the story of Philippe Petit, a Frenchman who committed “the artistic crime of the century” by dancing on a wire rigged between New York City’s Twin Towers in 1974.

We welcome back newly engaged Megan, our “evening librarian.” And congratulations to our volunteer Mary who has a new baby boy. You will also see a new face behind the desk: I’m happy to report that Claire Kilner has joined Team Library and will help out when she’s not killing rats.

To those who stopped by to use the Internet when it was down: sorry, and I’ve fixed it now (I turned the power on at the wall). Thanks to all the generous donors of books.

See you at the Library, Jess

My partner Matt Atkins and I are regular visitors to the island (Matt grew up there, his grandmother Hettie had the backpackers there, and we worked a winter with Kari and SIRCET a few years ago), and we are planning on moving to the island in September. We wanted to formally introduce ourselves to those who don't know us, and let you all know how excited we are to be making the island a more permanent home! We'll be operating our new boat charter business called Rakiura Charters and our B&B at Te Tahī on Kaka Ridge Road, and we are looking forward to immersing ourselves in the Stewart Island outdoors!

See you all soon, Alina Thiebes

Protecting what is pristine

Stewart Island’s physical separation from mainland New Zealand gives us a great opportunity to keep out some of the unwanted pests that have irrevocably damaged the natural environment in other parts of Southland.

“Stewart Island is relatively free of pest animal species and we’d like to keep it that way,” says Biosecurity Manager Richard Bowman. “We need the community’s help in containing species already here and in excluding harmful species that haven’t made it to the island yet.”

Some harmful animal species, such as rabbits, have not yet arrived on Stewart Island. If stoats were introduced their effects on native birds could be catastrophic. Many pest plants that are already on the island can still be brought under control, contained or eradicated, with the support of residents and visitors.

visitors perception and the economy of the island that pest plants such as gunnera and Darwin’s barberry and animals such as mice are not allowed to spread and thrive,” Richard says.

Why should I help?

✦ We need to maintain the pristine natural condition of the island. Once pest plants and animals become established it is very expensive to eradicate them.

How can I help?

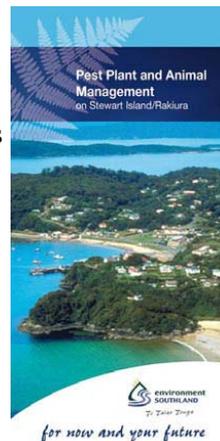

✦ You can help by cooperating with Environment Southland and Department of Conservation staff as they locate and remove priority pest plants on private property and public land.

✦ You can replace pest plants on your property with friendly alternatives.

✦ If you’re coming to the island, check and clean your packs, bags and boots before you leave. This helps to make sure that you don’t accidentally bring unwanted animals and plants with you.

- ✦ You can neuter and microchip your cat and other pets.
- ✦ Encourage the rest of the community to support the programme and help preserve Stewart Island’s biodiversity.

Brochures detailing more examples of pest plants and animals are being circulated to homes and ratepayers on Stewart Island shortly as part of the community awareness and education programme.

For more information on replacing pest plants in your garden or for any other information on pest plants and animals please contact Environment Southland’s Biosecurity staff on 0800 76 88 45 or check out the website www.es.govt.nz.

For more information, contact Adrienne Henderson, Assistant Communications Coordinator, ph 0800 76 88 45 or 03 211 5115

Rakiura Shipping would like to thank everyone who helped when the freighter broke it's mooring and ended up inside the wharf on July 3rd. A special thanks to those who helped with the salvage: Zane, Colin, Wayne, Steve, Alan, the fire brigade and the others who just arrived to help out. A big mention to Russell Hughes and his staff for helping to get the boat onto dry land and for the big effort they are putting in to get the us back in service as quick as possible. Thankyou you also to Sanfords crew and the ferry guys for the extra work they are doing to keep the freight and the fuel coming to the island. Lastly thanks to everyone for your support and patience and we should be back in business soon. Rakiura Shipping

Stewart Island Yoga

Stewart Island Yoga has been going for coming up seven years now.

We aren't all that good – the 'teacher' isn't, we dress badly, and for some us our toes are still a long way away. But we have a great time.

We get together most Wednesdays 5pm (during Winter) at the RSA.

All welcome!

Any queries – call Chris 494.

Websites-of-the-month from Vicki:

www.homehints.com.au

Notebook Magazine's home of hints and how-tos: full of recipes, household hints, fashion etc etc. My favourite is how to make play dough, pretty cool! Knead, pound, flatten, roll and squeeze the day away – working with playdough is lots of fun and helps little ones develop fine motor skills. When you throw a rolling pin, some plastic cookie cutters and a few child-friendly kitchen utensils into the mix, you're set for hours of entertainment. This homemade playdough is free of preservatives, so it won't last as long as bought preparations. It's also very high in salt, so it should not be eaten.

Playdough

- 2 cups (300g) plain flour
- 1/2 cup salt
- 2 tsp cream of tartar
- 1 cup (250ml) water
- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- Liquid food colouring

1. Place the flour, salt and cream of tartar in a large bowl, and stir until combined. Make a well in the centre, add the water and oil, then stir until a dough forms.
2. Turn the dough on to a non-stick surface and knead for 2-3 minutes or until smooth.
3. Add the food colouring, a few drops at a time, and knead through the dough until you have the desired shade. If the dough becomes too sticky, add a little more flour.

Note: This play dough will keep for one week. Cover with plastic wrap and store in an airtight container.

Beverley Osborn created these puzzles.

The completed puzzles will contain the same word on Row One and Column One; Row 2 Column 2 etc.

For the top puzzle the clues for the words are given.

The bottom puzzle is more difficult, as you get just a few letters head start, and you must fill in words that fit (the same for Row 1/Column 1, Row2/Column 2 etc).

If that's too hard the easier version of the bottom puzzle is on p 5.
